Reproductive Health* is an open access, peer reviewed journal focusing on all aspects of human reproduction.

Reproductive Health aims to provide an international platform for research in reproductive health, including social and gender issues, sexual health, country and population specific issues, assessment of service provision, education and training and also in a broader range of gynaecological and obstetrical topics related to reproductive health. The challenge of the field is to evaluate current promising interventions rigorously, address emerging issues such as synthesizing ever-increasing research findings, and develop innovative dissemination and communication strategies.

Reproductive Health is affiliated with the International Association for Maternal and Neonatal Health (IAMANEH).

The journal considers the following article types: research articles, case reports, commentaries, reviews and study protocols. For further details, see www.reproductive-health-journal.com/info/about/.

Reasons for publishing in Reproductive Health:

- All articles published in the journal are open access; universally accessible online without charge.
- High visibility for your work - anyone with Internet access can read your article, free of charge.
